Dear Parents and Carers,

Happy New Year! I hope that you all had a restful and enjoyable festive break. It is clear you were all delighted to return your children to school as we had simply stunning attendance on our first day back which I hope to maintain. Attendance is really one of the key indicators of success at school. I also wanted to acknowledge the support and sheer joy in the many performances and events just prior to the holidays which were on the back of lots of hard work from parents, carers and staff alike. I'd particularly like to thank the PTFA for their role in another fantastic Christmas Fair.

This term is always where a lot of the really good progress happens. For those learners that are gearing up for critical external assessments like SATs and GCSEs it really is a time to focus in on developing consistently good habits around independent work and our staff work tirelessly for every learner to support them in truly surprising themselves at what they can do. I know you appreciate that the teamwork between yourself and us is important as those habits need support at home to really become embedded. If there are any queries about how you can support your children revising, completing homework or just being more curious please get in touch.

I also wanted to let you know that on our PD day we learned a great deal from two inspirational speakers. The first, was a representative from the Children and Adolescent Mental Health Service (CAMHS) who trained us around some of the challenges facing many young people from difficult experiences really early in their life and how this can then lead to behaviours exhibited throughout life. A thought provoking session that provided good strategies for us to use to help our learners. We are a genuinely inclusive campus and all visitors, formal or not comment on our supportive, welcoming and tolerant atmosphere which is something we continue to want to improve on even further.

The second, was a Doctor in psychology who has researched what really makes the happiest 2% of people tick – and what we can all do to become happier every day, and the influence this has on all of those around us. Dr Andy Cope felt we had a “jaw-dropping” campus with “amazing staff” and I hope you agree that if our mission is to be an inclusive campus filled with genuinely happy people all the way through we won't go far wrong and your children will continue to get a great education both academically and socially.

We have lots of exciting up and coming events, including the BBC careers panel event at Huntcliff and a theatre production of Cinderella at Saltburn Primary so here's to a fantastic 2019!

Yours sincerely,

Peter Eyre
